

Jennifer Gladstone

Jennifer Gladstone is an Atlanta native with more than 15 years of television news experience.

Ms. Gladstone graduated from The Westminster Schools, received a Bachelor's Degree in Business Administration from Washington University in St. Louis, and then returned to Atlanta to do graduate work in Communications at Georgia State University.

Her television career started in Myrtle Beach, South Carolina and took her to Kentucky and then back home to Atlanta as a reporter/fill-in-anchor at WGCL-TV. She then became the National News Anchor for Sinclair Broadcasting's NewsCentral operation in Baltimore. After four years in that role, she moved over to be the Morning Anchor for the company's local Fox affiliate, WBFF-TV, anchoring three and a half hours of live programming every day.

Ms. Gladstone is now enjoying a freelance career that includes anchoring live broadcasts both on the air and on the web. She also does voice-over work and performs as a spokesperson for corporate video projects.

Ms. Gladstone is married and has two young children.
